5. In February 1953 the 22 Brigade was in the area between Sinp'o (N 40-02, E 128-12) (DV-3231) and Kalma (N 40-51, E 129-43) (EA-6022), and the command post was in Tokchu-ri (N 40-32, E 128-54) (DV-9287). The 3 Battalion command post and a signal platoon were in Sŏkho-dong (N 40-43, E 129-18) (EA-2507). The 3 Battalion Staff Section, Rank and File Section, Policy Section, and Reconnaissance Section were in a civilian house at EA-249070. A 76-mm. and a 45-mm. artillery battalion were near the 22 Brigade command post. The 22 Brigade was also known as the North Korean 363 Army Unit. The infantry of the 2 Battalion was known as the 566 Army Unit and the artillery of this battalion was known as the 595 Army Unit. The infantry of the 3 Battalion was known as the 571 Army Unit.
6. The command post of the 82-mm. Artillery Company, 3 Battalion, with 54 men, was in Haep'yong-dong (N 40-43, E 129-16) (EA-2307). The command post of the 1 Company, 3 Battalion, with 93 men, was at EA-228063 in a civilian house. The 1 Company was armed with 8 x 82-mm. guns and two heavy machine guns.
7. The command post of the 2 Company, 3 Battalion was in four civilian houses at EA-005150. The 82-mm. Artillery Company was also quartered in these houses because their former barracks were bombed in January 1953. This company, 180 men, was armed with 12 x 82-mm. guns and 2 heavy machine guns.
8. The command post of the 3 Company, 3 Battalion was on a hill, 168 meters high, near Ch'on-dong (N 40-49, E 129-31) (EA-4418). The company, 130 men, was armed with 4 x 82-mm. guns and two light machine guns.
